When it's cold outside, hit the pool

by Birgit Thompson

USAG Stuttgart Public Affairs Office

Indoor pools are a great way to relax, unwind or just have good old fun. Some really amazing indoor pools can be found here in the greater Stuttgart area.

Bad Cannstatt, for instance, has its name "Bad" because of the natural underground springs that feed most of the mineral baths and pools within the city limits.

These springs feed the pools of the Leutze mineral bath, Bad Cannstatt mineral bath as well as Bad Berg. Böblingen sports its own mineral bath just down the street from Panzer; the Mineraltherme (mineral spring) Böblingen.

The Leutze bath covers a large area along the right bank of the Neckar River. It offers eight indoor and outdoor pools with varying temperatures, accounting for more than 1,700 square meters of surface space and a brand new children's area.

The main pool is equipped with relaxing massage jets along the walls and a tropical rain shower that turns on every hour. You can swim from the indoor section through a passage to the outdoor portion, where a counter current lets you feel the workout, or you can just enjoy a soft massage on one of the many underwater whirlpool loungers.

Bad Berg, the oldest of the three Canstatt spring fed baths, opened its doors in 1856 and has been privately owned until 2006 when the city purchased it.

With the new owner new aqua courses were established. Aqua spinning on special hydro bikes, aqua Tai-Bo, and aqua fit on special underwater gym equipment, aqua jogging, Pilates, aquarobics and many more programs are now offered.

The Mineraltherme (mineral spa) in Böblingen offers, next to the pool and sauna areas, the "Mimaris" where you can enjoy exclusive beauty and wellness highlights.

On the first Friday of each month you can enjoy the "Long-Spa-Night" (Lange Therme-Nacht), where you can swim past midnight, enjoy the night sky from the hot whirlpool outside or listen to life music in the classic sauna.
